

Stella loves

This week's must do, see, buy By Sonia Haria

Giorgio Armani's new Eye and Brow Maestro is a make-up bag must-have. Use this waterproof cream (which comes in eight shades) on the brows or as a matte eyeshadow. £26.50, from selfridges.com

If it's relaxed pieces for weekend wear you want, try the American label Emerson Fry, which has now launched in Britain at KJ's Laundry. Shirt, £200, and trousers, £235, from kjslaundry.com

She dropped out of the spotlight after 1998's The Miseducation of Lauryn Hill, but now the eight-time Grammy-winner Lauryn Hill is back and out on tour. lauryn-hill.com

The British Museum's latest blockbuster exhibition, Ming, takes on the Chinese dynasty synonymous with wealth, taste... and vases. Until 5 January 2015; britishmuseum.org

© The Trustees of the British Museum

Women in Clothes: Why We Wear What We Wear is a gloriously eclectic account of fashion choices, and includes famous names such as Lena Dunham and Miranda July. Published on Thursday (Particular Books, £24)

The Italian fashion house Marni celebrates its 20th anniversary this month. We love its latest collection, which celebrates the brand's quirky, playful designs. Dress, £1,280, shoes, £550, and bag, £1,130; marni.com

Penelope Chilvers has just opened her new store on Duke Street, London, and is showcasing her latest autumn collection. Our top pick? These leopard-print and fuchsia-laced trainers. £199; penelopechilvers.com

I-SPIED

GARETH WYN DAVIES | Assistant editor
The thing I most love about this canvas tote from the brilliant men's shop Trunk? The colour. They describe it as Chocolate. I call it delicious! £155; trunkclothing.com
For more I-Spied products visit telegraph.co.uk/ispied

There is more than a whiff of revolution in the current Royal Court Theatre programme. Teh Internet is a Serious Business (deliberate misspelling and all), by Tim Price, is an anarchic retelling of the birth of hacktivism and online sabotage. royalcourttheatre.com

WIN THIS

To celebrate the launch of its Pro-Collagen Marine Cream Ultra-Rich, Elemis is offering 10 Telegraph subscribers a jar each, worth £80. To enter, log on to telegraph.co.uk/subscriber